Your good Lordships assured to Commaund,

Arthur Grey

Lords of the Councell.

Note on hands

The address and the text of this letter, including the subscription, are both in Spenser's characteristic secretary hand; Grey has added his usual signature. The endorsement is in two distinct hands, the first a mixed hand and the second a cramped secretary; this suggests that these two parts of the endorsement were added to the letter at different times. The note in the bottom left-hand margin of the text of the letter ('Lords of the Councill') is in an italic hand, probably Spenser's; these 'addressee' notes were probably added to the foot of letters before sending them to Grey to be signed, so that the secretary subsequently addressing and dispatching them would know how to direct them.
